

Visual Story for Mary Poppins

Today you are going to see Mary Poppins the musical at the McPherson playhouse.

It is a big theatre.

There will be singing and dancing on a big stage.

You will walk in the big glass doors.

When you get inside, there will be a person dressed in black to take your ticket. They will scan your ticket and it will make a beep sound.

To the left, you will go to the theatre where there is a big stage.

To the right, there will be a place where they sell drinks and snacks.

There are 3 washrooms, down the hall by the place where they sell drinks, or down a long hallway before you get into the theatre. There is a bathroom for people who use a wheelchair. It is right outside the theatre. There will be quiet spaces you can go when you need it.

This is what you will see when you sit in your seat.

The red curtain will be down when you sit in your seat.

You will hear piano music and then all of the singers and dancers will come on to the stage.

The lights will stay on in the theatre for the whole show so you can see and won't be in the dark.

Things you will see and hear throughout the show: Bright colours, one piano, dog barking, whistle

Summary of the show: A man of many talents named Bert, introduces us to the troubled Banks family. Young Jane and Michael have sent many nannies packing before Mary Poppins arrives on their doorstep. Using a combination of magic, and common sense, she must teach the family how to value each other again. Mary Poppins is an enchanting mixture of irresistible story, unforgettable songs, breathtaking dance numbers, astonishing stagecraft that makes this musical soar high above the rest.
